WELCOME to high point

Located in North Carolina, High Point is nestled within the Piedmont Triad. Piedmont, meaning “foothill”, ultimately from latin “pedemontum”, meaning foot of the mountains.

Rich with history and full of surprises, High Point boasts everything from castles and plantations to zip lines and high ropes, not to mention the world’s largest furniture store.

You are sure to find unforgettable adventures in a city with charm, history and down-home hospitality.

high point HISTORY

Downtown High Point, 1905

Incorporated in 1859, High Point earned its name by being the highest point on the North Carolina railroad between Charlotte and Goldsboro. The center of High Point emerged where the railroad crossed the Plank Road, creating a thriving center of commerce.

An abundant supply of wood led to the production of spindles and axe handles, followed shortly by a booming furniture industry. High Point Furniture Company was the first furniture factory in the United States, and realized immediate success. Other local entrepreneurs saw the opportunity in furniture and began their own companies. By 1903, High Point was home to more than 30 furniture factories. Intuitively, the manufacturers of the area established their first wholesale furnishings show in 1909, which today is the largest wholesale home furnishings show in the world.

A thriving textile industry had also grown throughout High Point during this time, with plants scattered throughout the city and surrounding villages. It was not long before High Point had also garnered the title of “Hosiery Capital of the World.” In recognition of these influential industries, a four-story chest of drawers (the middle drawer of which holds a dangling pair of socks) was constructed to commemorate the city’s worldwide renown.

Over the years, High Point has built on its rich history. Explore High Point’s furniture heritage, unique architecture, historical homes, and strong African American history.

about the high point

REGIONAL VISITORS CENTER

Travelers to the region and triad residents alike can experience a venue like no other at the Regional Visitors Center located within the High Point Convention and Visitors Bureau. While other visitor centers are city-centric, this center offers information for tourist opportunities in neighboring cities and surrounding areas.

Presented in the style of an art museum, 21 galleries engage the imagination with innovative, interactive touch screens, beautiful photography, videos, music and brochures about tourist attractions.

Furniture shopping is the number one reason visitors come to High Point.

To help consumers navigate the more than 50 retail stores in High Point, kiosks at the Regional Visitors Center provide information based on the style and type of furniture carried at each store.

“The center was designed from the ground up to help visitors coming through the region to plan their trips. Even if High Point isn’t the final destination, we’re the perfect hub and starting point because High Point is the epicenter of the state’s interstate and state highways,” says Tim Mabe, HPCVB president and CEO. Travelers can reach most of the major attractions in the state in under two hours.

The High Point CVB’s Interior Design Services also help consumers to identify an area interior designer who can help them with everything from a room design plan to access to trade-only showrooms.
