About Lake Lure.

The land now occupied by Lake Lure has an extraordinary and somewhat mysterious history. Hickory Nut Gorge, much of which today lies beneath the lake, attracted visitors and travelers long before Rumbling Bald Resort existed. The Cherokee and Catawba nations considered the Gorge to be sacred ground between their respective territories and forbade killing anyone who traveled through it. By the 17th Century A.D., the Gorge had been incorporated into the Cherokee system of major trails leading from the mountains to the Piedmont and flatlands of North Carolina. The Cherokee Trail would later become the Rutherford Trace route for early European settlers. This route was improved and used as subsequent wagon and coach roads, and eventually was the same path trod by the Cherokee. Historians claim that as early as 1500 A.D. the Gorge would become the route for the modern NC State Highway 74 as it winds towards Asheville.

The origin of Lake Lure can be traced back to the early 1900s, when Dr. Lucius B. Morse, a Missouri physician, visited the area and became enthralled with the beauty and therapeutic quality of the Blue Ridge mountains. High atop Chimney Rock, Dr. Morse peered down to the valley below, with its rolling hills and largely undeveloped land, and imagined a picturesque resort community constructed around a serene mountain lake. So inspired by their younger brother's vision, Dr. Morse's brothers provided the financial backing for him to purchase 8,000 acres and bring his dream to life.

To create the centerpiece of his resort, Morse decided to impound the Rocky Broad River. Dam construction began in 1925, and the impoundment was completed in 1927. The dam's power plant began operations shortly afterward. At normal water levels, Lake Lure covers approximately 720 acres and spans 27 miles of shoreline. Although it was Morse's vision that led to the creation of the lake and its surrounding community, it was his wife, Betty, who actually coined the name Lake Lure.

Camp Chimney Rock for Boys also began operations in the early 1900s. Tucked away in one of the lake's most pristine coves, the camp attracted boys (and later girls) from around the nation. Generations of youth experienced an exhilarating and challenging summer life at their treasured mountain lake. Although the stock market crash of 1929 brought a halt to the resort development that Dr. Morse had envisioned, the boys' camp thrived on the shores of Lake Lure for another 50 years.

RUMBLING BALD
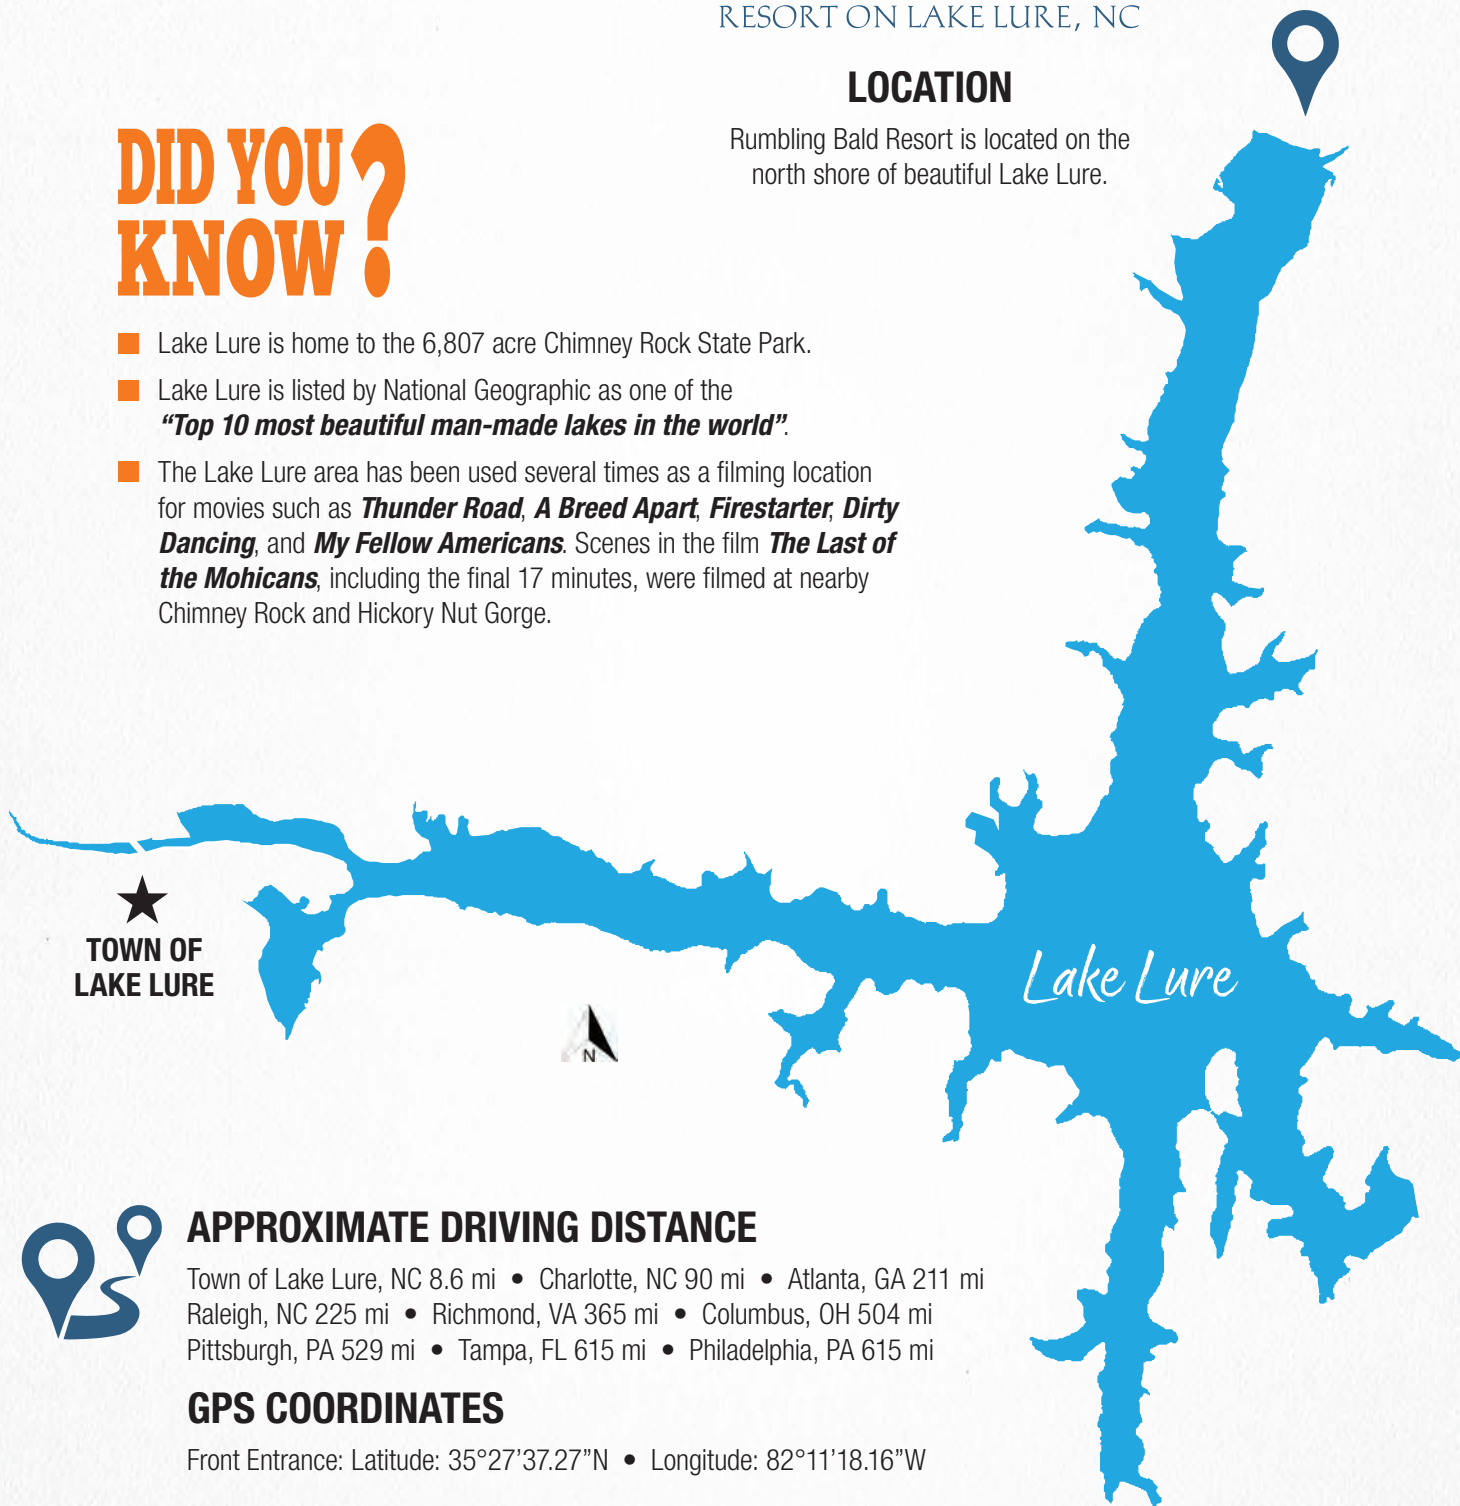

RESORT ON LAKE LURE, NC

About Rumbling Bald.

What began with a solitary houseboat in 1956 steadily grew to become the sprawling lake community Rumbling Bald Resort is today. Travelers worldwide come to the Resort to enjoy the lake, spa, golf courses, and the sheer beauty of this incredible place. Guests at the Resort also have the unique opportunity to explore a region of North Carolina steeped in fascinating history and cinematic culture, including the Carolina Gold Rush of the 1800s and the making of films like Firestarter (1984), Dirty Dancing (1987), and Last of the Mohicans (1992).

Rumbling Bald Resort, located on the lovely north shore of Lake Lure, takes its name from the beautiful ridges and cliffs of Rumbling Bald Mountain (Old Bald), which surrounds the resort and provides some of the most dramatic scenery in Western North Carolina. Rumbling Bald Mountain was not always known by its current name. On the evening of February 9, 1874, a local preacher prayed a now renowned revival asking God to move the hearts of sinners by “making the mountain to shake and tremble beneath their feet.” The next day, Old Bald did just that. The earthquake-like rumbling and trembling terrified the locals. Convinced the world was about to end, local farmers turned loose their livestock, because they believed they wouldn’t be around to care for them anymore. The rumbling continued intermittently for six months before the mountain went silent again. Scientists have since theorized the tremors and sounds were caused by rocks falling into the extensive cave system beneath the mountain. With the exception of a few occasional rumbles, the mountain has remained silent. Locals throughout the years called the mountain Shaking Bald and Quaking Bald before finally settling on Rumbling Bald. For those with a historical affinity, the USGS has collected some newspaper clippings about the 1874 rumblings that are worth a read.

https://volcanoes.usgs.gov/observatories/cvo/historical/historical_newspaper_clippings_non-eruptions.shtml

While the mountain is the most significant natural feature at Rumbling Bald Resort, Lake Lure is unquestionably the greatest man-made attraction. Lake Lure includes three long bays, gorgeous beaches at Rumbling Bald Resort and other locations, and one sunken town. Visitors to the area may notice numerous roads, landmarks, and sites named “Buffalo” in honor of one of the Blue Ridge Mountains that resembles a bison. Deep below the surface of Lake Lure lies the remains of the town of Buffalo, a small farming community of perhaps 150 souls. Most of Buffalos’ buildings and the local graveyard were removed prior to the flooding of the area, but a few buildings remain beneath the waters. Russ Meade has conducted significant research into this nearly lost piece of Lake Lure history, but a large portion of the town’s history remains shrouded in mystery. For more information, check out Russ Meade’s extensive historical blog about this incredible and beautiful region.

Vacations by the lake can be great family getaways. Of course, sand on the beach and water are a combination that invite fun and will trigger most kids' imaginations to create fabulous games and activities.

Fill the Bucket

You will need two large buckets and two smaller buckets or cups. Separate the family into two equal teams and place the buckets on the sand, about 50 feet from the shore. At the word "go," the first person on each team races to the water, fills the smaller bucket or cup then runs back and dumps it into the bigger bucket. Once they dump the water, the cup is passed to the next person on the team who repeats the process. You can continue the game until the buckets are full, or set a timer and see which team puts the most water in the bucket before the time is up.

Sharks & Minnows

You will need two or more players. This beach game can be played on the shore or in shallow, still water. One person is designated as the shark, and the other players are the minnows. If the players are older, blindfold the shark to make the game more challenging. The shark has to tag the minnows as they run around the shark. When a minnow is tagged, they become a shark and help tag the remaining minnows. The last person tagged is crowned the fastest minnow.

Sand Darts

There are many ways to play this beach game, but one of the easiest is to draw a large circle in the sand, with several smaller, concentric circles inside. The smallest circle is the bullseye. To play, each person stands several feet away from the dartboard and tosses pebbles or shells, trying to get them as close to the bullseye as possible.

Don't forget the sunscreen! Experts recommend applying SPF 30+ or higher every 45-60 minutes. Forgot something? No worries! Sunscreen and other sundries are available at the Wellness Center and North Shore Beach Cabana.

Was SUP?

Rumbling Bald Resort offers premium access to Lake Lure and Rumbling Bald's beaches. There are many activities to enjoy, like swimming, skiing, kayaking, and canoeing, but we also have stand-up paddle (SUP) board rentals for guests who desire a unique lake perspective and a great cross-training workout.

Whether you're new to SUP boarding, or a seasoned professional, there are a few things to remember before taking a board out on the lake.

Get the right board - Choose the SUP board that is right for your skill level and planned activity. There are two basic hull types. A planing hull is great for general use and beginners. Planing hulls are flat and wide, with a curved nose similar to a surfboard. A displacement hull is thinner, with a pointed nose, and is better suited for long-distance paddling and racing. Next, make sure you choose a board with the proper volume. A board's volume (measured in liters) determines how much weight it can float. The higher the volume, the greater the weight. Finally, we recommend using either a medium or longboard for Lake Lure. If you're not sure which board is right for you, ask one of our experts and they will be happy to match you up with the perfect board.

Get the right gear - If the weather is cold, be sure to wear a wet or dry suit. In warmer weather, a t-shirt and shorts or swimsuit are great; after all, you'll want to be able to move freely and it's highly likely you'll get wet. Also, be sure to use a leash. This helps you stay with your board if you fall off. Most importantly, always wear a personal flotation device and plenty of sunscreen!

Mounting your board - Stand in the water next to your board. While holding the board at either side, climb onto the board and assume a kneeling position, with your knees just behind the center point of the board. While in the kneeling position, get a feel for the board's balance point. The tip should not rise up out of the water and the end should not dip below the surface. As you hold on to the edges, adjust your position on the board to stabilize it. Once you're balanced, slowly stand up on the board, one foot at a time, placing your feet where your knees were, about hip-width distance apart. If you're new to SUP board, you might want to paddle from a kneeling position until you gain some experience in keeping your balance on the board.

Maintain the proper stance - Once you're standing, keep your toes pointed, your knees slightly bent, and your back straight, balancing with your hips, not your upper body. Keep your eyes ahead and on the horizon, not on your feet, and remember that as your forward momentum increases so does your overall stability.

Start paddling - SUP board paddles have an angled blade. When paddling, the angle should face away from you, which feels counterintuitive at first. If you're paddling on the right, place your right hand low on the paddle grip and your left hand at the top. Keep your arms straight and twist from your torso as you paddle. Use your abdominal muscles, rather than your arms, to paddle forward. Push down on the paddle grip with your top hand to push the blade all the way under the water's surface, then pull it back toward your ankle. Lift, remove and repeat, reversing hand positions when you switch sides.

Now that you're SUP boarding, the lake is yours – enjoy!

Behind the Scenes at Kids Adventure Camp

Ask any eight-year-old what they like most about Kids Adventure Camp and they'll tell you speed tubing, lunch, and swimming, in that order! Rumbling Bald Resort's popular day camps deliver fun, friendship, and food to your favorite little camper. Take a peek below to see what your child can expect at Kids Adventure Camp!

Every June through August, our dedicated camp counselors and staff design action-packed, outdoor activities for campers ages 6-18. Your young adventurer won't miss their TV shows or video games while they're enjoying a variety of land and water sports against the majestic backdrop of Lake Lure and the Blue Ridge Mountains. Camp activities vary day to day.

The nature-loving adolescent can get their thrills by hiking, rock climbing or riding horses along local trails at the Cedar Creek or Riverside Stables. They can also mine for rocks, minerals and gemstones, take a turn flying through a leafy forest canopy on a zipline with guides from Boulderline Adventure or Canopy Ridge.

We also have pickleball, basketball, miniature golf, tennis, group games and arts & crafts for the child who prefers something a little closer to civilization.

If your child is secretly part dolphin or mermaid, Lake Lure Adventure Company's popular speed tubing excursion takes them on a thrilling water adventure.

The best part about camp is that Mom and Dad can relax, knowing their children are closely supervised by our caring, experienced counselors and instructors. Some families even plan their summer vacation around Kids Adventure Camp, returning year after year so their children can take advantage of the unique natural beauty and recreational opportunities that Rumbling Bald Resort offers.

Be a kid here.

It's the perfect way for kids to enjoy their time at Rumbling Bald Resort.
